Assessment Overview

Write a 2,000 word magazine article on FOUR separate investigations that not only explore issues related to gender and sexual identity, but also provide appropriate strategies that reflect social justice.

The separate investigations are;

Task One: Portrayal of Women in Pop Culture and Media.

Task Two: The influences of pornography on sexual expectations in relationships and the impact of this on wellbeing.

Task Three: Personal Attitudes, Values and Beliefs around sexuality and gender.

Task Four: Strategies, what can we all do?

This will be done in 4 separate parts, then put together and printed out in a magazine format:

- Be creative in your layout and have some appropriate pictures.
- Have a provocative or controversial title (something to catch the reader's eye).

Assessment Conditions

All work must be completed individually.

You will be assessed on how comprehensively you are able to analyse issues related to sexuality and gender and develop strategies for addressing these issues.

Strategies that reflect the values of social justice, require personal and collective actions that contribute to a societal good and benefit the well-being of individuals, groups and communities.

Task 3: Sexuality

500 words

Explain how and why attitudes, values and beliefs, influence people's thinking about LGBTQIA+.

Scenario:

Harry is a 17-year-old male who, for as long as he can remember, has been attracted to males. This is something which he feels ashamed of and feels like he should try to change (or grow out of), so he has never had a romantic experience with another guy. Instead, he has had several girlfriends. Although he gets on well with girls, he has never had a lasting relationship with any of them. He considers himself in most respects a typical New Zealand male – he enjoys (and is good at) different sports, spending time with friends and skateboarding. He hasn't told anyone that he is attracted to guys because he thinks that his friends, others at school and his family would give him a hard time about it, or reject him. The images of gay men in the media confuse Harry – he wonders how he can be gay when he is not interested in beauty and fashion and does not have any of the mannerisms that are typically associated with homosexual males. Harry's English teacher has chosen a novel to study in class which has a homosexual male as the main character. The novel is about the challenges he is facing as he comes to terms with his emerging sexual identity. As he is reading through the novel, Harry is relating closely to this character's journey. He is starting to realize that he has not made a choice to be gay, and is going to have to be honest with himself and people around him about who he is. He is nervous and scared about what his future holds and feels it is unfair that he has to "come out" as gay – no-one has to come out as heterosexual.

Statistics about LGBTQIA+ in New Zealand.

People's current attitudes and values towards LGBTQIA+ involve.

Societal expectations on what is accepted to be "normal"

Impact on Harry via Hauora.
